MILD WINTER IN ALASKA.

Necessaries of Life Are Plentiful and Cheap at Nome.

Victoria, British Columbia, March 27. The steamer Danube brings news of the stravelers who will come from Nome this winter. McRae and Nagel, who were deputized to carry to San Francisco the reports of the engineer on the railway to be built from Port Safety to Cape York, came up the river in forty-six days, with a single team of dogs. They say the winter has been unprecedentedly mild at Nome; that all inccessaries of life are plentiful and chean there and the streams in all directions are prespecting well. The discoveries on the Siberian side are being left alone, as it has been given out that forcism miners will not be permitted there. Many "in-going" men and women were met on the frezen river, the latter suffering considerably.

At Dawson preparations were being made for the spring clean-up, which is estimated at from $12,90,90,00 to $20,90,00. The notable event of the last month was the marriage.

SEVERE EXAMINATIONS.

Army Chaplains Hereafter Must Undergo Them.

Washington, March 27.-President McKinley has nominated the Reverend Barton W. Perry of Oakland, Cal., to fill the only vacancy in the list of chaplains in the regular cancy in the list of chaplains in the regular army. With the nomination was set a precedent for future selections. Mr. Perry has been subjected to a most rigid physical and mental examination, such as is required of a Lieutenant in the army, and the mental examination embraced nearly everything of a trying character. The candidate, for instance, was required to know a great deal of the history and literature of Greec, Reme, Germany, France, England and America, including something of the feuidal systems. Secretary Root has decided that the examination for chaplains in the future shall amount to something and that no shall amount to something and that no more superannuated preachers shall be ap-pointed for mere political services, to en-large the retiring list in a short time.

In some manner they slipped too far down into his throat and became fastened. They so nearly filled his throat that the air passage was almost cut off and he began to strangle. He tried to pull the teeth out, but every attempt only made them more secure in their position, until he was compelled to abandon the effort. He coughed soid constantly gray weaker until he felo ever on the floor from sheer exhaustion. An ambulance was called and he was taken to the North End Dispensary. When he reached there the wind whistled as it passed in and out the narrow passage, growing smaller every minute because of the swelling of the bronchial tabe. Doctor Edward F. Randadi soon released the teeth from their unnatural position and thus saved Grow's life. In a few minutes more without relief he would have been strangled.
